A numerical method is presented that can calculate the emission rate and polarization of luminescent media (for given excitation conditions), utilizing Monte Carlo simulations. The implementation is based on a rigorous and numerically efficient method for calculating the excitation rate of a single photon process, called the generalized Markov method (GMM), which can handle electromagnetic and material effects. The method is verified by calculating the emission rate and polarization properties for a variety of luminescent media: diamond, sapphire, silicon, and Rhodamine 6G (R6G).4.9.14 • I DO NOT, with JONES, take the opportunity I have with the "Lord's Day" to stir up any opposition against the State "Establishment" and for this reason I have avoided these activities -- it is only my earnest desire to see the Lord's Day as He originally intended. 14.4.14 • I FIND I AM ABLE to do any work I commit to, and if I AM unable to, then I can tell the Lord what the real root of my inability IS to fear Him. 14.4.14 • I SEEK TO SPREAD THE GOSPEL OF THE LORD as the LORD has given me the gift of teaching for the love of Him who sent me. 14.2.14 • I BELIEVE in ONE GOD. In the FOURTH chapter of John I read the following statements: John 4:24 WHY
