For the first time, a major international conference on global health was held in Israel as an integral part of the International Conference on HIV and TB. This unique event brought together a wide range of global health experts and activists. With public and political pressure on TB growing in so many areas of the world, and with TB in many countries having come back onto the policy and political agenda as a result of the AIDS pandemic, the opportunity to share ideas and networks with this broad range of global health experts is critical. The event is focused on the TB-HIV Continuum, but there were also many workshops on other important issues, including the role of universal health coverage, the migration of health workers and how to develop
