Percutaneous cholangio-centric duct-to-duct stenting versus endoscopic papillotomy in the treatment of biliary-type pancreatitis: a prospective randomized study. In recent years percutaneous transhepatic biliary drainage (PTBD) has become a reliable method for the treatment of acute biliary-type pancreatitis. PTBD can be performed in any medical facility, and has been shown to be equal to endoscopic sphincterotomy with regards to the frequency of pancreatic adverse events. The aim of this study was to examine the potential benefit of percutaneous cholangio-centric duct-to-duct (PCTDD) stenting in the treatment of acute biliary-type pancreatitis. A prospective randomized study was conducted in 41 inpatients with severe biliary-type pancreatitis treated by PCTDD stenting (n = 18) or ERCP (n = 23) for percutaneous transhepatic biliary drainage. A total of 18 patients with pancreatic duct stones were randomized to one of the two methods of biliary drainage. The therapy was successful in 15 patients (83%) in the PCTDD group versus 19 patients (83%) in the ERCP group. In 3 patients the PCTDD stent could not be placed and in 1 patient the PCTDD stent could not be retrieved. The overall complications in the PCTDD group consisted of bile leakage, cholangitis, peritoneal effusion and persistent fever. The overall complication rate in the ERCP group was mainly limited to minor bleeding at the papilla during ERCP. The length of stay in hospital was significantly shorter in the ERCP group (20 vs. 38 days). The severity of the underlying disease and pre-existing parenchymal disease did not influence the success rate. The median rate of secondary stenting was significantly higher in the ERCP group (55 vs. 11%). This study shows that PCTDD stenting in patients with acute biliary-type pancreatitis is a viable, safe, and effective alternative to ERCP.Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina The Constitutional Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina () is the highest independent legal institution in Bosnia and Herzegovina.
