This study was designed to establish whether there was a relationship between the number of drinks consumed by older drinkers and how long they had been drinking. A retrospective study of the drinking patterns of men over 65 years of age examined in interviews in 1990 and 1996, in comparison to their drinking patterns ten years earlier. There were more heavily drinking men (more than 30-40 drinks per week) in the 1990 cohort than in the 1980 cohort, but they tended to have been drinking for a long time and had already been drinking heavily for a considerable time. The average weekly alcohol consumption for the 1990 cohort was slightly higher (but not significantly so) than for the 1996 cohort. The older group are drinking more, but are drinking for a longer time.Centre-left and centre-right parties reached agreement on a series of reforms on Sunday that are the basis for a new government, Italy's premier-designate said. "This is a compromise with great democratic spirit," said Matteo Renzi, leader of the Democrats (PD), the centrist party that helped to oust the populist Five Star movement from power and bring the centre-left to power in 2013. Populist anti-establishment Five Star Movement, which has seen support surge to 20-25 percent after it swept the European parliamentary elections last month, slammed the government for giving back the reforms it took under former premier Silvio Berlusconi.
